NEWS RELEASE

UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON SCHOOL OF LAW TO HOLD SEMINAR ON ADVANCED COMPUTER AND CYBERSPACE LAW

DAYTON, Ohio — The University of Dayton School of Law will hold its 13th-annual seminar on advanced computer and cyberspace law Friday, June 7, at the Dayton Convention Center.

The seminar will begin with registration at 8 a.m., followed by an introduction by Robert Kreiss, professor of law and conference chairman, at 8:30 am. Concurrent sessions will run until 5 p.m. To register or for more information, call (937) 229-3325.

The seminar will explore a variety of issues concerning the growing developments and legal challenges of computer and cyberspace law and licensing intellectual property. Topics include trademarks, using "pesticides" to protect Web sites from unwanted visitors, advanced patent law, international issues, enforcing judgments, jurisdictions and electronic evidence.

Registration is $350 by May 17 and $390 after May 17. The registration fee includes seminar sessions, light breakfast and lunch and a copy of the course manual.

Scholarships are available for full-time judges, government employees, professors and full-time students.
